SHERIFF TAKES CATTLE HOME

Court Intervenes in Row Over Damage Done to Cabbage Crop.

Sheriff Walter Oneal "rode the range" Monday night when he took possession of nine head of cattle in Rockcreek township on a writ of replevin issued in circuit court earlier in the day.

The suit was filed by William and Ella Hollowell, demanding possession of the cattle from Joe Burton.

Sheriff Oneal found the cattle—described in the complaint as including a white-face brindle cow, a black and white part Holstein, a white-face cow, two yellow Jerseys, a black cow with white feet, one red cow with white stomach, a cream and white Guernsey and a brindle cow—in the Burton barn and returned them to the Hollowells on a neighboring farm.

The Hollowells had William H. Dobbin file the suit in court when Burton refused to turn over the cattle.

Crops Damaged.
According to the story told Sheriff Oneal, the Hollowell cattle got into the Burton cabbage patch several weeks ago, causing some damage, and the owners offered to settle for the damage.

In arranging the settlement, they selected the largest cabbage head in the patch, weighed it and multiplied the weight by the number of heads claimed to have been damaged. Then the cattle owners offered to pay the ceiling price. The damage was figured at $4.06, but Burton demanded $10.

Last week the cattle got into Burton's tomato patch and this time he demanded $200 damages. He drove the cattle into his barn and refused to give them back to the owners until settlement was made.

In the action instituted Monday, the Hollowells asked for immediate possession of the cattle and $600 damages.

He served on a submarine chaser all the time he was in the Pacific and reported that he went as long as six months at a time without putting his feet on the ground.
